Ellicottville Historical Society planning multiple events to celebrate 200 years of your favorite ski town

BY SPENCER TIMKEY

The Era of Good Feelings. In 1820, President James Monroe's practically unopposed re-election campaign came during a time when American unity ran at an all-time high. After the War of 1812, a nation in its infancy had just defeated the world's foremost superpower (again) and began its expansion west and south.

In a small corner of western New York, the Holland Land Company was in the midst of mapping and creating. From Franklinville to Great Valley, new towns began popping up. Little did these early settlers know that one of them would eventually transform into a ski town that brought visitors from across the world. Ellicottville.

In 2020, the town of Ellicottville will celebrate its Bicentennial. Thanks to the Ellicottville Historical Society, the celebration will revolve around 3-4 distinct events as unique as the town's history. Dawn Westfall, a member of the Bicentennial Committee and president of the Ellicottville Historical Society, said there's much to celebrate.

"We saw the success of Great Valley's bicentennial a few years ago, and we think we can mimic that in Ellicottville," she said. "With the Holland Land Company, many of the towns in the surrounding area are beginning to or have celebrated their 200th birthdays."

If you're wondering - there is a difference between the village and the town. In 1987, the Village of Ellicottville celebrated its sesquicentennial (150th), but that was only after it had been incorporated by the Town. In many eyes, however, Ellicottville is Ellicottville - so at the once-a-month meetings, different ideas are tossed around on how to best celebrate this historic landmark.

"When we first started planning the celebration a few years ago, we'd have meetings every few months," Westfall said. "But recently we started having them once a month to keep everyone on the same page. And it's a good opportunity for ideas to be tossed around. Which there are a lot of!"

The community has stepped up. Local artist Barbara Fox created a cancellation stamp celebrating 200 years that will be used by the local Post Office. Ellicottville Distillery owner Bryan Scharf plans on creating a commemorative whiskey, after someone found a bottle from a past era labeled "Pride of Ellicottville."

The Historical Society plans on having three events that revolve around the celebration. The first will coincide with Holiday Valley's Winter Carnival in March. "It's a collaboration between Holiday Valley and the Historical Society," Westfall said. "Since the Historical Society building is closed during the winter, a lot of Ellicottville's visitors have never had the chance to visit it. So the plan, as of right now, is to create a traveling museum where many of the artifacts can be displayed right at Holiday Valley."

The second, the Town's actual birthday. "April 13th is the big day," she continued. "We'll have a town birthday celebration, kind of mimicking what we did in Great Valley. We'll have Pioneer Certificates. If you have ancestors that were here before 1880, you'll receive a certificate and recognition, plus a special invitation to the party. We have the application on our Facebook page."

The third will revolve around alumni weekend in July. "We'll try and piggyback off of the alumni festivities," she said. "It's Old Home Weekend, which is a tradition for Ellicottville since the 1910s. The Calumet Club, which was a forerunner to the current chamber of commerce, started it to get local businesses together. And the 154th Regiment, called "The Hardtack Regiment," was a Union force that fought during the Civil War. There's a celebration for that with a reunion for descendants. We're planning on having a parade and a myriad of other events."

The celebration for Ellicottville's 200th birthday begins in 2020. For more info on the series of events and how you can help, visit the Ellicottville Historical Society on Facebook.

NEW PISTEN BULLY GROOMER

After its long journey from Kässbohrer All Terrain Vehicles Inc. in Reno, NV, the Pisten Bully 600 groomer found its new home at HoliMont. Snowmaking at HoliMont has kicked in earlier than ever so this new machine will be put to work right away. Check out more info and footage of HoliMont groomers in action at holimont.com.

NEW SNOWSPORTS DIRECTOR

We're excited to announce that Travis Widger has been selected as HoliMont's new Director of Snowsports. In addition to filling the leadership role at HoliMont Snowsports, Travis will be bringing the Racing operation and Snowsports together so that all aspects of Snowsports at HoliMont can operate collaboratively under the same umbrella as we move into the 2019/20 snow season.

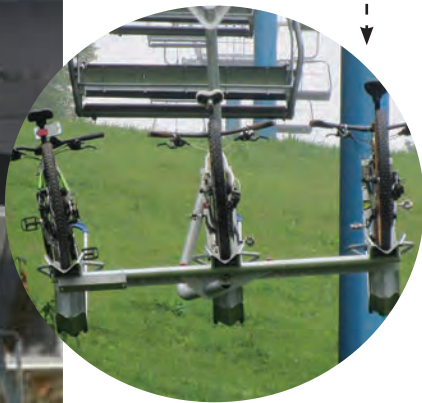

PARKS BY PERKS

Chris Perks comes to HoliMont with a passion for designing and building terrain parks, and a focus of growing the freestyle scene. Spanning two decades, previously at Holiday Valley and Kissing Bridge, his experience includes building and fabricating park features, running the groomers, and shaping parks for all levels of skiers and riders. Chris stepped away from the grooming fleet to coach the snowboard race team at HoliMont for three seasons, traveling to Nationals with qualifying members. His leadership skills and compatibility across all departments makes him a team player and valued asset to the HoliMont family.

BIKE LIFTS

Early this summer HoliMont installed a demo bike carrier on the Exhibition High Speed Quad. The experiment was a huge success with members and the local mountain bike community. With any luck, we will be lifting bikes to the top of the hill next summer on our Sunset lift which will give access to miles of trails in the state forest as well as some new single track at HoliMont, including the new 1-mile long flow trail.

HOLICX FOUR

A record number of racers turned out for this year's cyclocross race at HoliMont. The weather was perfect for racing and the grueling challenge of the course did not disappoint. Every year this event grows thanks to the sponsors and Western New York's commitment to fall bicycle racing. HoliMont will continue to host bicycle events all season long. Log on to holimont.com to stay in the loop.

SNOWMAKING TEMPS

Thanks to the early frigid temperatures, HoliMont was able to click on the snowmaking systems earlier than ever. This quick jump on the season should help establish a base that should last the entire season. HoliMont enlists the snowmaking power of the SMI Super Pole Cat which was co-developed here at HoliMont.

ALPINE ATTIC: ELLICOTTVILLE'S VINTAGE SKI SPOT

With an impressive collection of vintage skis and paraphernalia, owner Terry Norton is now selling at two locations

BY SPENCER TIMKEY

Collecting vintage skis isn't a job. It's a way of life.

For the past 40 years, Alpine Attic owner Terry Norton has scoured the east coast for hidden gems from skiing's Golden Age. From garage and estate sales to shuttered ski shops, from the vastness of the Internet to the least likely places, his love and dedication for collecting stems from a lifetime of skiing.

"I started collecting in the early 1980s," Norton said. "Growing up working in my aunt and uncle's ski shop - The Red Door - opened my eyes to how much good stuff was out there. In 1980, the Winter Olympics were in Lake Placid, and my aunt had a lot of Olympic-themed stuff - posters, patches, etc. After she told me she planned to throw it all away, I took it. The journey kind of started there."

Traveling to the far corners of the east coast looking for vintage skis has led Terry to stop at various garage sales, estate sales, ski shops and department stores. Along the way, he bartered, traded, bought and sold a fluctuating collection of vintage skis, ski boots, ice skates, snowshoes and more.

"The collection constantly changes," he said. "It's not like someone is mass producing vintage skis. I've got to keep my ear to the ground for fresh inventory. I call it the thrill of the hunt - looking in the corners and stopping at places you might not think of. That's where the good stuff usually is."

One trip sticks out in particular. In 1995, on his way through Lake Placid, Terry noticed a ski shop that looked like it had been closed for a few years. Finding a number on the door, he pulled out his cell phone (the first one he owned!) and called, figuring it would lead to a dead end. To his delight, a woman answered, and he would later drive off with vintage Olympic skis, posters and much more.

Terry kept collecting, adding bits and pieces each year before setting up a tent at Ellicottville's Fall Festival in 2008. Floored by the number of interested people who stopped to chat, he realized he was on to something. Alpine Attic was born.

Originally, he put his collection in Ameri-Can. After it closed, he wanted to continue showcasing, so struck a deal with both the Ellicottville Country Store (Ashford Junction) and upstairs at Dekdebrun's Apex Boot Store to showcase and sell.

"It will be around the same floor space," he said. "And there will be very similar products of the collection in both places. I might have more skis and ski-oriented things at Dekdebrun's, but it's always changing."

Alpine Attic's collection boasts paraphernalia from a bygone era of skiing. Like a pair of all-wooden, never-drilled Rossignol skis from the 50s, just as they were coming to the United States. "M-Olympique - Made in France - you'll be hard pressed to find these anywhere else."

"When people used to shop for their skis at department stores, Macy's would put their logo on the skis. Skis like these - and the matching poles - are very rare. I'm lucky to have found these."

The products aren't just old skis, however. Alpine Attic also has snowshoes, old ski posters, photographs of Ellicottville before it was as we know it now, and skis Terry has transformed into wine racks - complete with iron cast from the Amish.

"You look at an old pair of skis and I see a work of art, something that's desirable to hang over the fireplace. It's not for everybody, but a lot of people gravitate towards it. Some people collect cars, or motorcycles, or stamps. I collect skis."

For more on Alpine Attic, head to www.thealpineattic.com. Browse Terry's inventory at the Ellicottville Country Store, 4 miles east of the village, or upstairs at Dekdebrun's Apex Boot Store on Ellicottville's main drag. You can also view items and reach out to Terry by searching his Facebook page (@ellicottvillealpineattic) or call 716-704-6162.

Starting a solo career in the late 70's, her debut album, "Chaka" produced the mega hit "I'm Every Woman".

Staying current and relevant as a soloist as well as doing collaborations with artists like Mary J. Blige, Ray Charles and most recently with Ariana Grande on "Nobody" from the soundtrack of the movie "Charlie's Angels", Khan is hitting the road and making a stop at Seneca Allegany Casino & Resort in January to sing some of the most iconic songs over the past 50 years like "I Feel For You", "Got To Be There" and "Through The Fire"! Experience the Magic of Christmas at Olmsted Manor

Rest, Rejuvenate and Enjoy the Holiday Season

By DANIELLA GRIESBAUM, ANF VISITORS BUREAU

Experience the magic of the holiday season during the Christmas Open House at the Olmsted Manor and Retreat Center. From blankets of sparkling snow to dazzling Christmas decorations donated and hung by local churches from Ludlow, PA, this open house will be a laid-back celebration with live musical entertainment. Shining in all things red, green and white this holiday season, decorations will sparkle throughout every room and on both floors of this elegant mansion. These beautiful decorations will be displayed in the library, dining room, guest rooms and elegantly hung along the main stairway leading to the second story. Guests can enjoy homemade Christmas cookies and punch or hot cocoa by a crackling fire while enjoying lots of conversation, hosted in both the historic manor house and the Groves Lodge retreat center.

During the Christmas Open House at Olmsted Manor Retreat Center, tour the 1917 Tudor-style manor house, explore the recent renovations in the retreat facilities, or play duck-pin bowling in the private two-lane bowling alley. The Olmsted and Ludlow history archives will also be available for perusal during this event. The open house is a free, family-friendly event held on Dec. 1 and Dec. 8 from 3:00-8:00pm. Delve into the vast amenities Olmsted has to offer during this open house in order to plan a future retreat of your own.

The ambiance, comfort and home cooked meals make Olmsted the perfect location for group retreats, seminars, workshops, family getaways or a personal overnight adventure. The Manor, an original Tudor style mansion, offers eight individual and charming guest bedrooms with accommodations for up to 12 guests. The spacious living room with fireplace and grand piano, elegant dining room and furnished kitchen, all retain their original architectural details and elegance.

Groves Lodge is a modern, fully accessible facility, which can accommodate up to 42 guests and includes a central dining area for up to 50 guests. Built on the slope of Olmsted's spring-lined hillside, the cut stone construction of this building with its informal lounge and inviting fireplace gives the Lodge an atmosphere of comfort and rustic charm. The recently constructed annex to the Lodge holds two spacious meeting areas for guest use.

Beyond the spacious living room of the Manor and the two meeting areas of the Lodge, there is Hickman Hall. This spacious, fully-equipped meeting facility with conference chairs and tables for 40 to 50 guests is centrally located between Groves Lodge and the Manor House. Hickman Hall is available for use by overnight guests or day groups and must be booked well in advance of the anticipated event date.

The Carriage House accommodates guests in a private, two-bedroom apartment-style lodging located above the former Olmsted carriage garage. Book for the private solitude of a rejuvenating individual retreat or quaint, cozy family getaway.

Nestled in the woods of the Allegheny National Forest on over 30 acres of beautifully developed land, the retreat center is made up of the original Olmsted estate. George Olmsted married Iva Groves in 1904. They had their first child, Robert, in 1908 and a daughter, Betty, was born in 1912. They then began planning for their family home to be built in the small village of Ludlow.

Philadelphia architect Albert Bodker initially refused the project arguing that a small community such as Ludlow would not justify such a mansion. However, upon pressure from Mr. Olmsted, he eventually relented and spent a year onsite with builders from the Hyde-Murphy Company of Ridgeway, until the Manor House was completed in 1917.

Upon completion, the Tudor mansion contained wonders such as oak paneling, a Steinway piano and family crests worked in stained glass on the main stairwell, all of which still exist today. For the children, there remains the original cork-floored game room and private two-lane bowling alley. At the entrance today, greeting visitors, are the original large iron gates, which are illuminated by intricate iron work completed by Master Craftsman Samuel Yellin, who also designed the entrance of Washington's National Cathedral.

For more about the Olmsted Manor Retreat Center and Christmas Open House, or to book your future rejuvenating retreat, call 814-945-6512 or visit www.olmstedmanor.org.
